Well, let us share with you a few of our favorite family holiday traditions. And let us add to that a visit to Santa's workshop. During the months of November and December, we head to a local shopping mall for a sneak peek at holiday ornaments and toys. We visit Santa's workshop and hand him an ornament that we selected from the display window. Then we wait with anticipation as he works his magic and places it under the tree. The recipient opens the gift and shares the experience with family and friends. Another tradition many of us enjoy is the lighting of the community Christmas tree. This is also a real family event. When the event is held in town, we will usually go to the house where the tree is located to see the magic. The lighting of the tree is performed during the year in various ways. Sometimes the branches are decorated in advance; other times they are lit at the site of the tree. If the tree is already decorated, the lights are turned on to brighten up the day for visitors of the tree. The family tradition continues Of course, Santa's workshop is also an annual tradition. I remember when we moved in 2000, my daughter was four years old and she was so excited to get her first Christmas gift from Santa. She had followed us to our new house, had Christmas lights on our truck and was waiting
